

Dark and forgotten attic spaces experience a revival. WIDE RANGE OF FAKRO ROOF WINDOWS PROVIDES AN ABUNDANCE OF NATURAL LIGHT. This light is the main interior designer, creating the space and contributing to arranging a cosy room on a small area under the roof.

KITCHEN

INTERIORS IN THE ATTIC

FAKRO roof windows installed in combinations along with bright colours dominant in the room fill it with an abundance of natural daylight, while a small kitchen is optically increased.

WHEN PLANNING A KITCHEN SPACE IN THE ATTIC

you should take into account how much time you spend in this room and how much of your budget can be invested to realize the project. Cooking enthusiasts find the kitchen as one of the most important rooms in the house. It will occupy a larger area of the attic space and will be designed with the attention to the smallest details. People who do not like cooking or simply do not have enough time will be satisfied with a smaller kitchen to suit their individual needs. In both cases, this room should be bright, spacious and functional which may seem difficult to realize when designing interior in the attic. Nothing could be further from the truth. By applying bright colours and ensuring high quantities of natural light, you will get an optically enlarged and fully functional kitchen that will delight your guests.

FAKRO wooden windows perfectly match structural beams separating kitchen from the living space in the attic.

A small kitchen located in one-room flat with its bright colours and ensured ingress of natural light becomes light and fresh.

